Election overview

The network of 121 Local Aboriginal Land Councils (LALC) in New South Wales is divided into nine Regions across New South Wales. The number of LALCs within each Region ranges from nine to 21. Elections are held every four years to elect nine councillors of the NSW Aboriginal Land Council – one from each of the nine Regions. Elected councillors serve a four-year term.

Legislative changes

Prior to the 2024 NSW Aboriginal Land Council elections, amendments were made to the Aboriginal Land Rights Regulation 2020 (NSW) to improve election processes and bring them into line as much as possible with New South Wales state and local government election practices.

Table 3: Amendments to the Aboriginal Land Rights Regulation 2020 (NSW)

Change	Impact of amendment	ALR Regulation clause
Specify requirements for a Local Aboriginal Land Council (LALC) membership roll sent to the Registrar	The amendment requires the LALC membership roll sent to the Registrar to list the membership in alphabetical order by surname and to have a consecutive number listed next to each member.	CI 56(1A) – Certification of roll
Extension of time for the Registrar to prepare the electoral roll for each Region	The amendment provides an additional 7 days for the Registrar to prepare and certify the electoral rolls for each Region and send them to the returning officer.	CI 56(2) – Certification of roll
Simplification of process to appoint electoral officers	The amendment enables the returning officer for the election (rather than the regional electoral officer) to appoint deputy electoral officers to assist in taking the poll.	CI 57 – Officers to assist returning officer
Enable electors who lose or did not receive postal voting materials to vote at a polling place	An elector to whom a ballot paper has been posted may vote at a polling place, if they declare that they have not received or have lost the ballot paper or declaration envelope and will not use either if the elector later receives or finds them.	CI 70(4) – Distribution of postal ballot-papers
Permit electors to deliver postal votes to regional electoral officers or deputy electoral officers	An elector may deliver their envelope containing a postal ballot paper to a regional electoral officer or deputy electoral officer before 6pm on election day. Previously, it had to be posted or delivered to the returning officer.	CI 72(4)(b) – Postal voting procedure
Require a regional electoral officer or deputy electoral officer to forward postal votes to returning officer	A regional electoral officer or deputy electoral officer who receives an envelope must, as soon as reasonably practicable, forward the envelope to the returning officer.	CI 72(5) – Postal voting procedure
Further extension of time for receipt of postal votes	The amended regulation allows postal votes to be posted before 6pm on polling day and be received by the NSW Electoral Commission until 6pm on the 13 th day following election day. Previously, postal votes had to be received before 6pm on the fourth day immediately following election day.	CI 73(1) – Preliminary scrutiny of postal votes and transmission to regional electoral officer

Election administration

In accordance with section 121 of the Aboriginal Land Rights Act 1983 the Electoral Commissioner for New South Wales was the returning officer for the elections of councillors for the NSW Aboriginal Land Council. Section 122(2) of the Act requires the Minister for Aboriginal Affairs, in consultation with the NSW Aboriginal Land Council, to determine a date for the election of councillors and to notify the returning officer of that date. In a letter dated 28 April 2023, the Minister for Aboriginal Affairs and Treaty, Minister for Gaming and Racing, Minister for Veterans, Minister for Medical Research and Minister for the Central Coast the Hon. David Harris advised the Electoral Commissioner that the elections would be held on Saturday, 24 February 2024. The elections were conducted in accordance with the provisions of the Act and the Aboriginal Land Rights Regulation 2020.

Electoral rolls for the elections

In the lead up to the NSW Aboriginal Land Council elections, the Act and the Regulation provide that the Registrar appointed under the Act is to:

- receive from the chief executive officer of each LALC a current membership roll for that LALC
- ensure, by reference to that current membership roll, that the consolidated membership roll kept by the Registrar is current
- prepare an electoral roll for each of the nine Regions, containing the names of each voting member of a LALC in that Region
- certify that each Regional electoral roll is a true and accurate record of all of the voting members of the LALCs within that Region
- send the certified electoral rolls to the returning officer for the NSW Aboriginal Land Council elections.

A person is only entitled to vote if the person is a voting member of a LALC within a Region and is only entitled to vote in respect of the LALC area for which the person is a voting member. Voting members of a LALC enrolled by Wednesday, 6 December 2023 were entitled to vote.

Support for electors

Postal vote application

A postal vote application was sent to every enrolled voting member of each Region as an initiative to increase voter participation in addition to correspondence from the NSW Aboriginal Land Council (see a reproduction of the correspondence at Appendix 1).

Elector brochure

Following the ballot paper draw, a brochure was mailed to each enrolled member in the eight contested Regions, containing information specific to their Region. The brochure served as a direct communication with electors, containing key election dates, voting options, a list of polling place locations, candidates running for election and other information specific to each Region (see Appendix 2).

Assistance with voting

The NSW Electoral Commission provided support for electors to help cast their vote:

- all polling places had accessible voting screens, maxi pens and magnifying sheets available for use by electors
- all electors could contact the NSW Electoral Commission via the National Relay Service
- Auslan interpreters were available on election day via Skype.

These services along with other information to support electors were published on the NSW Electoral Commission's website and displayed on posters at all polling places.

Voting options

Postal voting

Postal voting was available for the 2024 Aboriginal Land Council elections. Applications opened Monday, 8 January and closed at 6pm Monday, 19 February 2024. A postal vote application was sent to every enrolled voting member of each Region to support voter participation.

Election day voting

Two types of ballots were distributed to electors on election day, determined by each elector's individual circumstances:

- ordinary vote – issued to an elector whose name and address were on the voting roll at the polling place
- disputed vote – issued to electors who:
  - were marked on the roll as having voted, but claimed not to have voted
  - had been issued with a postal vote but claimed to not have applied
  - were not shown on the roll but who claimed to be eligible to be included on the roll.

Method of voting

The election was conducted using the optional preferential voting system. Electors were required to show preferences for at least one candidate; however, electors could give preferences to as many candidates as they wished.

Advertising and social media

Print and digital advertisements were placed in the Koori Mail covering the notice of elections on Wednesday, 15 November 2023 and nominations on Wednesday, 17 January 2024 (See Appendix 6).

The NSW Electoral Commission posted calls for expressions of interest to work at the elections, reminders to return postal votes and an alert regarding the final results of the elections on its social media platforms (see Appendix 6). The Electoral Commission also shared relevant posts from the NSW Aboriginal Land Council Facebook page with its followers regarding nominations and other key election information.

Candidate resources

The NSW Electoral Commission operated a helpdesk for candidates with enquiries on the electoral process. Candidates could contact the helpdesk by phone or email. A Candidate and scrutineer guide was published on the Electoral Commission's website that provided election-related information, including about the nomination process, electoral material, certified rolls, voting, and counting and results.

The NSW Electoral Commission conducted a webinar for candidates, with the presentation slide pack published on the Electoral Commission's website for reference. Two election bulletins were produced and distributed by the NSW Electoral Commission on 23 February and 7 March 2024 and published on the Electoral Commission's website.

Nominations

Nominations for the New South Wales Aboriginal Land Council election opened on Tuesday, 2 January 2024. Nomination forms from potential candidates had to be received by the returning officer no later than 12 noon on Tuesday, 30 January (the close of nominations).

As part of the nomination process, candidates were required to pay a nomination deposit of $50 to the returning officer at the time of nomination. The nomination deposit was refunded to candidates if the candidate was elected, or if the candidate received more than 4 per cent of the total first preference votes.

Ballot paper draw

The Electoral Commissioner, as returning officer for the elections, conducted the ballot paper draws at 2pm on Wednesday, 31 January 2024 to determine the order that candidates' names would appear on the ballot paper for each Region. The ballot paper draw was open to the public and live-streamed for people who could not attend in person. Ballot papers for each of the eight contested Regions are reproduced at Appendix 3.

Election staff

Targeted recruitment strategy

The NSW Electoral Commission implemented a targeted strategy for the recruitment of staff to work at the 2024 NSW Aboriginal Land Council elections. The aim was to prioritise the selection of applicants who identified as First Nations. Previous experience working in elections was not required. The NSW Electoral Commission worked with the NSW Aboriginal Land Council, Local Aboriginal Land Councils, Australian Electoral Commission, Queensland Electoral Commission, Victorian Electoral Commission, local businesses, universities, colleges, local councils and other organisations to promote recruitment opportunities for Aboriginal people. The NSW Electoral Commission supported the recruitment campaign with social media communications.

Applications to work at the election were made via an online expression of interest. Applicants were directed to the NSW Electoral Commission website for information about the roles available and the recruitment process, supported by an employment help desk (telephone and email) throughout the recruitment cycle. Recruitment of all staff was managed centrally in NSW Electoral Commission head office.

For the 2024 NSW Aboriginal Land Council elections, 443 people were employed to support the elections, 201 of whom were First Nations people.

A Regional Electoral Officer, selected from the NSW Electoral Commission's senior election official talent pool, was appointed by the Electoral Commissioner to assist administering the election in the eight contested Regions. Located at the NSW Electoral Commission with the support of its officers, the regional electoral officer was responsible for:

- recruitment of staff to assist to work on election day
- securing venues for polling places
- responding to enquiries and complaints from the public, electors and candidates
- preparing procedural documentation for polling place managers
- providing advice and support on election processes and procedures to polling place managers and election officials working in each Region
- receiving and recording of polling place results and declaring the result of the elections.

Polling place managers and election officials were recruited to work on election day. These roles were required to set-up polling places, issue ballot papers, assist electors, sort and count ballot papers and decommission the polling places.

Polling place managers and election officials were selected from the NSW Electoral Commission's expression of interest for each of the contested Regions. Preference was given to applicants who identified as having Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander background and/or had experience in working with First Nations communities.

Staff training

Training focussed on the key competencies of each role and was primarily delivered online, with all roles having compulsory modules. The online program enabled staff to practice their skills and reflect on their learnings via scenarios and knowledge quizzes. The modules were concise, informative and engaging.

The NSW Electoral Commission delivered two hours of training to each of 136 polling place managers online via MS Teams. Class sizes were small to ensure the training allowed practical, hands-on activities and for targeted feedback to be given to all participants. Again, survey feedback was positive, with 99 per cent of respondents answering that they "strongly agree" or "agree" that the training was well organised, easy to follow, interactive and prepared them to undertake work at the election.

Work health and safety principles

The NSW Electoral Commission's work health and safety principles were followed for the 2024 NSW Aboriginal Land Council elections. The principles support staff safety and wellbeing. Focussing on fatigue management, the principles include cut-off times for counting on election night and closing times for voting venues and the returning officer's office.

General principles

- staff will not work in isolation
- one 30-minute break to be taken every five hours
- a minimum of 10 consecutive hours between rostered shifts
- staff should not work more than six consecutive days
- maximum 10-hour shifts, with the exception of election day.

Election day operations

- all counting to cease at 10pm on election night
- election staff will not work past 10.30pm on election night
- staff should not be expected to drive more than one hour from their voting/count venue to a nominated material drop-off point on election night
- staff responsible for returning materials on election night will finish no later than 12am.

Venues and logistics

Logistics and material hubs

The NSW Electoral Commission appreciates the support from the Australian Electoral Commission for the provision of premises throughout New South Wales for use as material distribution points. These were located in Albury, Armidale, Banksmeadow, Dubbo, Gateshead, Grafton, Moree, Orange, Taree, Queanbeyan, Wagga and Wollongong.

Polling places

The NSW Electoral Commission selects the most suitable premises from those available. Venue considerations are extensive and include size, location, accessibility, amenities, street frontage, access for deliveries, internet connectivity and workplace health and safety. The ability to secure premises that meet functional requirements presents challenges, particularly in negotiating agreements to enter short-term leases when the supply of premises is limited.

Polling places in all Regions were open to electors from 8am to 6pm on election day. These locations were published on the NSW Electoral Commission's website and also in the brochure sent to all enrolled members of each Region.

Table 5: 2024 NSW Aboriginal Land Council elections venue numbers by accessibility

Venue type	Fully accessible	Assisted access	No wheelchair access	Total
Polling places	37	92	7	136

Supplies and waste management

A total of 78,000 ballot papers were printed (73,500 ordinary and 4,500 postal). Extra ballot papers were supplied to each polling place to mitigate the risk of running out or damage.

In providing electoral services, wherever possible the Electoral Commission seeks to use paper and cardboard items comprising recycled content and to ensure that the paper and cardboard items are themselves recycled. For the 2024 NSW Aboriginal Land Council elections, standard cardboard items used in voting centres included voting screens, accessible voting screens, ballot boxes, signage and recycle bins.

Scrutineers

Appointed scrutineers were given the opportunity to witness the polling place operations, inspect ballot boxes before the commencement of voting and counting, observe the opening and extraction of ballot papers from postal votes and disputed votes, observe all ballot paper counting and could object to the formality of a ballot paper or the determination of preferences on a ballot paper.

Counting and results

Counting procedures

Votes for the NSW Aboriginal Land Council elections were counted using the optional preferential system. This is a voting system in which an elector indicates by numbers their preference(s) for individual candidates. It is not compulsory to show a preference for every candidate on the ballot paper.

Table 6: Count timeline

Date	Activity
24 February	Election day: Initial counts commenced at polling places at 6pm (close of voting)

8 March	Deadline for return of postal votes: 6pm (no results can be declared before this date) Scrutiny of declaration and postal envelopes completed

Table 8: Disputed votes

Disputed votes scrutiny timeline	Disputed votes extraction and count timeline
Commenced the week beginning Monday, 26 February 2024	9am Monday, 4 March, initial count followed by the check count.

Initial count after 6pm on election day

Following the close of voting at 6pm on election day, all polling places conducted an initial count of first preference votes of the ordinary ballot papers. An initial count is the sorting and counting of the ballot papers according to the first preference for each candidate. The results from the initial count for each Region are published on the NSW Electoral Commission website.

Check count

A check count of all the ballot papers was conducted in the two weeks following election day. A check count is a second count of the ballot papers. The check count is the official count that determines the elected candidates. The results from the check count for each Region are published on the NSW Electoral Commission website.

Distribution of preferences

The distribution of preferences to determine the elected candidate was conducted on Monday, 11 March 2024 following the close of return of postal votes (at 6pm, Friday 8 March 2024).

The optional preferential voting system requires a candidate to receive more than 50 per cent of the non-informal, non-exhausted ballot papers. This is called the 'absolute majority' of votes. If a candidate is not elected after the count of first preferences, the candidate with the lowest number of votes is excluded – each ballot paper is distributed to the candidates remaining in the count according to the next highest preference. If there is no further preference indicated, the ballot paper is set aside as exhausted.

After the distribution of ballot papers, if a candidate has an absolute majority, that candidate is declared elected. If there is still no candidate with an absolute majority, the next continuing candidate with the lowest number of ballot papers has their unexhausted ballot papers distributed as before. This process repeats until a candidate is elected with an absolute majority. Distribution of preferences reports for each Region are published on the NSW Electoral Commission website.

While a distribution of preferences is not required in a Region where a candidate obtained an absolute majority of the first preference votes, those counts may only be declared as final after the close of return of postal votes.

Declaration of the poll

The declarations of results were completed on Tuesday, 12 March, 2024 following the passing of the recount request deadline, which falls 24 hours after the distribution of preferences.

See Appendix 4 and Appendix 5 for the first preference results and distribution of preferences counts, respectively, by Region.
